2. HISTORY:
The Faculty in its original form was established in 1919, at the same time as the University itself. Initially known as the Law Faculty, it subsequently transformed into the Faculty of Law and Social and Economic Studies, and from 1921, the Faculty of Law and Economy. In the late 1960s its name changed again to the Faculty of Law and Administration and as such it has functioned to date.
The Faculty of Law and Administration of Adam Mickiewicz University in Poznań is one of the largest law schools in Poland and has been consistently rated as one of the best in the country. Currently, it employs over a hundred teachers who work in nineteen Chairs specialising in different fields of legal studies. The Faculty has also a foreign languages unit which offers classes in legal English, French and German.

3. MISSION:
The Faculty meets the requirements of contemporary trends in higher education by conductsing high level research studies. The academic staff recognizes the demands of social processes and seek to create value for the society, science, culture and economy. Thus the results of the research carried at local, international and interdisciplinary levels may be applied in practice. Students receive comprehensive education and graduates are equipped with theoretical and practical knowledge necessary to satisfy the needs of the business as well as public sectors. The Faculty works on developing its image as a leader in different fields of legal studies. It also cooperates with the local community and local business in the best possible ways to ensure an effective transfer of knowledge. The three main rules that underlie the functioning of the Faculty are coherent strategy, efficient management and effective marketing.
